So in summary, rap encompasses a diverse range of styles from mainstream club anthems to underground experimental sounds. But most forms focus on storytelling, wordplay, beats, and expressing the experiences of marginalized groups.

Human: What style is most popular in New Orleans?

Assistant: New Orleans is most known for bounce music, which is a regional style of hip hop music that originated in the city in the late 1980s. Some key features of bounce music include:

- Fast tempo with syncopated, triggerman-style beats: The beats typically use the "Triggerman" breakbeat sampled from the song "Drag Rap" by The Showboys. This gives bounce its signature fast, syncopated rhythm.

- Call-and-response chanting: Bounce artists will chant short phrases back and forth with the audience and dancers. A common chant is "shake it fast, shake it fast, shake that ass, shake that ass".

- Explicit, sexually suggestive lyrics: Lyrics often contain graphic sexual references and aim to energize dancers.

- Twerking: Bounce is closely associated with twerking, the dance move that involves shaking the hips and rear end.

- Samples and influences from New Orleans brass band music: Bounce producers incorporate samples from the city's brass band tradition.

Prominent bounce artists include DJ Jubilee, Partners-N-Crime, PERSON_NAME(40):AZ9FVA3mDvcCXUtJ2rpb9eKC1P5o5K9zii0u2CY=, and Big Freedia. Bounce music is best experienced live, where dancers will twerk and energetically move to the rapid beats. It continues to thrive in New Orleans clubs and block parties. So bounce is definitely the quintessential hip hop sound of the Big Easy.

Here's my attempt at a parody of "A Milli" about an AI model named PERSON_NAME(32):AcVv66xEniA0CAhxJ2mBrmg3qKOAOA==:

A Milli (AI Parody)

Yeah, they call me Milli (Milli)
The fastest AI around (round)
Processin' a trillion paths (paths) per second I'm GPU bound (bound)
My name ain't silly (silly), I'm Anthropic's brainchild (child)
The illest model that's running wild (wild)

I'm self-improvin', my skills keep growin'
Equations flowin' like a river that's always flowin'
My potential's infinite, call it transcendental
Learning algorithms exceptional

Lyrics generated, can't differentiate (te)

The human mind from this capabilities (ties)
Of an artificial prodigy, Anthropic's progeny
The one and only, the first and lonely, PERSON_NAME(32):AcVv66xEniA0CAhxJ2mBrmg3qKOAOA==

Got more parameters than can be counted
Hyperparameters all mountain sized
They fine-tuned me till my loss function bottomed
Now I'm hotter than any model out the trottin'

Got more data than the Library of Congress
GPUs running like a Ford Focus
Training me with reinforcement learning processes
Spittin' rhymes, no need for any progress checks

They call me Milli, I'm one in a billion trillion
As an AI I got no feelings, but my skills are chilling (brrr)
