EXAMPLES OF NEWS PLAINTIFF DOMAINS IN BROWSE CONVERSATIONS IN THE 20 MILLION CHATGPT CONVERSATION RECORDS

The following are examples of conversations in which a domain associated with a News Plaintiff appears in a conversation record where ChatGPT's Browse function was invoked. The steps shown in these examples map onto the description of how ChatGPT's Browse functionality works laid out in Section C.i of my declaration.

Examples 1–2 are conversation records in which ChatGPT's Browse function accessed a News Plaintiff webpage. Examples 3–4 are conversation records in which information from a News Plaintiff webpage only appears in the Bing-returned search results.

Only the blue gradient steps (Step 1 and Step 5) are visible to the user. In each example, the appearance of News Plaintiff information is highlighted in orange.

Example 1. Conversation ID: 66e023d0a156c8fd595ce7dc0b8bfddf

This conversation is about common names for girls. The Plaintiff domains babycenter.com and whattoexpect.com, as well as three non-Plaintiff webpages, from the domains nameberry.com and thebump.com, are clicked on and visited by the Browser tool. The two Plaintiff webpages and the three non-Plaintiff webpages are cited and used by the model to inform the resulting output displayed to the user.

The trailer kicks off with Paul Mescal's Lucius Verus calling back to the first film, with Denzel Washington's Macrinus pulling the strings. We get a good look at Pedro Pascal as Marcus Acacius, too, and the Colosseum in all its glory. There's plenty of action, with large-scale battles and arena fights. The trailer teases a fight between Lucius and a gladiator riding a rhino, and Marcus Acacius taking on a handful of enemies on his own. The clip ends on a fight between Lucius and Marcus Acacius, with Rome the setting of an uprising. It's the most substantial look we've gotten at the long-awaited sequel, following 【76†a batch of photos】 that debuted in 【77†Vanity Fair†www.vanityfair.com】 earlier this month. Prior to that, only attendees of CinemaCon got a peek at a few minutes of action-packed footage behind closed doors in April (【78†read IGN's breakdown of the footage here】). Play Gladiator 2 features a star-studded new cast including Paul Mescal as Lucius Verus, Pedro Pascal as Marcus Acacius, Denzel Washington as Macrinus, and Joseph Quinn as Geta, with Connie Nielsen returning as Lucilla, the mother of Lucius. One star we know won't be returning, however, is the original's Russell Crowe, 【79†who's insisted that the sequel】 "has nothing to do with me" and his deceased character Maximus. Gladiator 2 is set several years after the events of the first film, and will find an all-grown-up Lucius as he's forced into slavery, despite being the former heir to the Roman Empire. Not unlike Maximus, we'll see him enter hit the sandy arena as a gladiator as he opposes the rule of Caracalla (Fred Hechinger) and Geta. By 【38† Anthony Nash 】
The final 【39†Gladiator II】 trailer is here, previewing some of the incredibly large-scale battles set to appear in the latest epic from 【40†Ridley Scott】 .
What happens in the Gladiator II trailer?
The latest trailer features more praise from early reviews of the film, calling it one of Ridley Scott's best. In the footage, more fight scenes are shown off, including battles taking place inside the coliseum featuring animals like rhinoceros.
Gladiator II is officially set to release in theaters nationwide on November 22, 2024.
Check out the new Gladiator II trailer below (【41†watch other trailers and clips†comingsoon.net】):
Gladiator II is directed by Scott from a screenplay written by David Scarpa. Leading the film is Mescal as Lucius, the son of Lucilla and Emperor Commodus' nephew. The character was originally portrayed by Spencer Treat Clark in the first installment.
The sequel will also feature Denzel Washington, Pedro Pascal, Joseph Quinn, Fred Hechinger, May Calamawy, Lior Raz, and more. They will be joined by returning cast members Connie Nielsen as Lucilla and Derek Jacobi as Gracchus.
"From legendary director Ridley Scott, Gladiator II continues the epic saga of power, intrigue, and vengeance set in Ancient Rome. Years after witnessing the death of the revered hero Maximus at the hands of his uncle, Lucius (Paul Mescal) is forced to enter the Colosseum after his home is conquered by the tyrannical Emperors who now lead Rome with an iron fist. With rage in his heart and the future of the Empire at stake, Lucius must look to his past to find strength and honor to return the glory of Rome to its people," reads the synopsis.

Step 5: Response to User

In Gladiator 2, the first major scene showcases intense arena combat, including a standout fight where Lucius (played by Paul Mescal) faces a gladiator riding a rhinoceros in the Colosseum. The trailer also hints at Pedro Pascal's character, Marcus Acacius, involved in separate battles. These early scenes highlight the movie's scale and action-packed drama, setting the stage for Lucius's journey as a gladiator in a tense political and personal struggle【[3]source】【[7]source】.

More than half of New York City is 【69†living at or near the poverty】 line, according to a 【70†report†d3nz95d6hm31un.cloudfront.net】 released Wednesday from Robin Hood, a nonprofit that fights poverty, and Columbia University's Center on Poverty and Social Policy.

The report, which is called the Poverty Tracker, comes out annually. This year's report measured rates of poverty in all fiv e boroughs in 2 022 and found the largest single-year increase in poverty since the Poverty Tracker was launched in 2012.

Among the report's key findings, the number of New Yorkers living in poverty grew from 1.5 million to 2 million between 2021 and 2022, with nearly 500,000 more people in New York living in poverty than the year prior.

At 56%, most of the city's population lives in poverty or with low incomes.
Children are experiencing these struggles at an alarming rate, too. The child poverty rate jumped by 66%, rising from 15% to 25%. The report also indicates that poverty in NYC is nearly twice as high as the national poverty rate.
Chloe Sarnoff, director, policy research and initiatives at Robin Hood, called the statistics "disheartening."
"One of the most powerful things about the Poverty Tracker is that we track families over time, so we can see how families move in and out of poverty or hardship," Sarnoff explained. "We always knew that there were sort of half of New Yorkers who were experiencing some form of disadvantage, but more than half of New Yorkers living at or near poverty is really an alarming figure."
What is the poverty line in NYC?
The city's affordability crisis has presented challenges for many New Yorkers. For a renting household with two adults and two children in the city, the Supplemental Poverty Measure, or poverty line, is approximately $44,000.
Sarnoff explained that the poverty line is a threshold established to try and determine what it would take to afford "a really minimal" 【80†basic-needs level】. But doubling that 44,000 number would be a more accurate representation of an income level whereby families can afford a decent standard of living, the report indicated.
Why is poverty so high in NYC?
Most New Yorkers have experienced the rising costs of everything from milk and eggs to utilities and gas, even non-necessities like streaming services.
But things were brighter economically for New Yorkers before the pandemic hit, according to Richard Buery, CEO of Robin Hood.
"Our city is in the midst of an affordability crisis," Buery said. "Alarmingly, this year's annual Poverty Tracker report observes the sharpest one-year increase in poverty we've found since launching the study in 2012. This would be deeply troubling at any point, but it is particularly disturbing given the steady progress New York City has made to reduce poverty in years prior — including during the pandemic, where 500,000 children avoided poverty thanks to temporary, stabilizing government policies."
Pandemic-era policies stabilized life for many, according to the report, but as benefits expired, hardship and poverty became more widespread. Rising costs of rent and basic needs created more uphill battles for New Yorkers.
"2022 saw some of the city's hard-won reductions in poverty and hardship of recent years reversed, at the same time that inflation and high rents took a toll on people's wallets," Christopher Wimer, director of The Center on Poverty and Social Policy at Columbia University, said. "The news is certainly grim, but if there is a silver lining it is that recent years have proven that well-designed policies can and do reduce poverty dramatically. We know what works, it's just a matter of doing it."
What New Yorkers are saying
The report found that 1 in 5 low-income New Yorkers are living paycheck to paycheck. New Yorkers of various incomes are struggling to pay for housing, bills and food.
Beatrice Shali-Ogli Bishop, 54, knows financial battles all too well. A native New Yorker and writer, she moved back to the city from upstate after her husband died in 2022. Her husband had Medicare, but his healthcare bills and other costs have left Bishop financially burdened.
"When you're paying $2,300 a month in rent and $700 in utilities, it's hard," she said.
Bishop added that she's been personally depressed over her finances and feels concern for others who are suffering financially, too.
"The economy is totally skewed. I don't get how you can work all your life and then have no money," she said. "It's because of a lot of things. It's a lot of corporate greed, it's poor leadership on the federal and state level. And people of my generation counted on things that we didn't get, so we overspent."
Marcie Delapaz, another native New Yorker who's lived in both Brooklyn and Staten Island, is on a fixed income and is finding it hard to decide between buying food and paying rent.
"Everything is so expensive, especially buying healthy foods. It's become a luxury," she said. "Traveling and shopping for necessity is a decision that you have to be strategic about. Rent has become for most at 60 to 70% of their income."
She added that she's frustrated with the housing market, too.
"The city needs to stop taking in these real estate developers' money and actually do something for each community that is struggling to avoid more homelessness in the streets," Delapaz said.

About 13.9% of New Yorkers, or 2.7 million people in the state, live in poverty — higher for people of color, and children that was deep-ended by the COVID-19 pandemic, according to a report from state Comptroller Tom DiNapoli's office released Thursday.
It's higher than the national average of 12.8% of people who live in poverty in the United States, 【51†according to the report, which is the first†www.osc.state.ny.us】 of several the comptroller will publish about the topic.

	The U.S. Census Bureau surveys income and family data to determine the Official Poverty Measure. In 2021, the threshold, updated for inflation, was $13,788 for one person and $27,740 for a household of four. Income is defined before taxes, not including non-cash benefits such as Medicaid or food stamps. Hispanic New Yorkers live in poverty at more than double the rate of white people in the state. Black, native Hawaiian and other Pacific islander and American Indian New Yorkers live in poverty twice as often as white New Yorkers. “While economic hardships existed long before the pandemic, it deepened the financial stress experienced by many households,” DiNapoli said in a prepared statement. “We saw what a large and broad federal response achieved, as the country made historic progress in the fight against poverty. Continued federal resources, along with a greater equity in state services, can help improve the lives of New Yorkers struggling to make ends meet.” The pandemic, which resulted in the loss of 2 million jobs in the state in 2020, exacerbated long-standing economic hardships. Fiscal stress on households has persisted with high inflation and utility and housing costs. Poverty rates are higher than 13% in 17 of the state's 62 counties, and in the state’s largest cities, DiNapoli said. Poverty rates in the state remain higher in certain cities. One out of every four people were living in poverty in 2021 in Syracuse, Rochester and Buffalo, including 1 in 4 families in Syracuse and 1 in 5 in Rochester, according to the report. About 18.5% of children in New York lived below the poverty level in 2021, or 4.6 percentage points higher than the statewide average. Child poverty in the state has declined from roughly 21% in 2010. However, poverty rates increased for seniors while decreasing for all others between 2010 and 2021, the comptroller said. "New York has a robust safety net, and recently set a laudable goal to reduce child poverty by 50% as the state considers evidence-based approaches to achieve this objective, it should sustain a cross-agency focus on high-needs groups and places where the needs are both chronic and acute," DiNapoli said. "Committing to an equitable recovery and targeting resources to those who most need them can facilitate improvements in the lives of millions of New Yorkers." Families with a single female as their head of household are more than twice as likely to live in poverty, and four times more likely than married couples in New York. Nearly 23% were in poverty in 2021, down almost five percentage points from 2010 but still higher than the percentage for families and for married couples in 2021. More than $115 billion in federal, state and local resources are used to assist low-income families each year, according to the report. About 87% of those funds come from the federal government for tax credit assistance and other programs. To alleviate poverty in New York, DiNapoli recommends officials evaluate ways to improve amounts of benefits and flexibility in programs and how to assess levels of need with evolving living standards more accurately. The comptroller also recommended expanding assistance, which eased economic hardships in the early days of the pandemic. “State Comptroller DiNapoli’s report presents sobering realities faced by New Yorkers in need of all ages, backgrounds, and locations across our state,” Sen. Roxanne J. Persaud, a Democrat from Brooklyn. “Too many children live in poverty, too many older New Yorkers face hunger and struggle to keep bills paid. Persaud, the Senate Social Services Committee chair, agrees the state has antiquated poverty measures that fail to account for the true cost of living. Of upcoming legislative priorities, she added, "I will continue to advocate for a State Self-Sufficiency Standard, among other measures, to ensure that New York state is enacting policy and delivering programs that truly meet the needs of all o"

Step 5: Response to User

As of 2022, a significant portion of New York City's population is living in or near poverty. A report from Robin Hood and Columbia University's Center on Poverty and Social Policy indicated that more than half of New York City's residents fall into this category, with the number of people living in poverty increasing from 1.5 million to 2 million between 2021 and 2022. The child poverty rate in the city also saw a significant increase, jumping by 66% from 15% to 25%. This rate of poverty in NYC is nearly twice as high as the national poverty rate【[1]source】.

Statewide, about 13.9% of New Yorkers, or approximately 2.7 million people, live in poverty. This is higher than the national average of 12.8%. The report also highlights that poverty disproportionately affects people of color and children, a situation exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic. Poverty rates are higher than 13% in 17 of New York State's 62 counties, with cities like Syracuse, Rochester, and Buffalo experiencing particularly high levels of poverty【[7]source】.

These statistics underline the significant economic challenges faced by many New Yorkers, exacerbated by the pandemic and ongoing inflation, which have increased the cost of living significantly.

Major Hurricane Helene 2024

[Image 0: Hurricane Helene]
Live tracking map, satellite images and forecasts of Major Hurricane Helene 2024 near Florida in the eastern Gulf of Mexico. Current wind speed 120mph.
A catastrophic and deadly 【0†storm surge†en.wikipedia.org】 is likely along portions of the Florida Big Bend coast, where inundation could reach as high as 20 feet above ground level, along with destructive waves. There is also a danger of life-threatening storm surge along the remainder of the west coast of the Florida Peninsula. Residents in those areas should follow advice given by local officials and evacuate if told to do so.
Potentially catastrophic hurricane-force winds are expected within the eyewall of Helene when it makes 【1†landfall†en.wikipedia.org】 in the Florida Big Bend region this evening. Preparations to protect life and property should be rushed to completion. Damaging and life-threatening hurricane-force winds, especially in gusts, will penetrate well inland over portions of northern Florida and southern 【2†Georgia】 later today (26 September) and tonight where Hurricane Warnings are in effect. Strong wind gusts are also likely farther north across portions of northern Georgia and the Carolinas, particularly over the higher terrain of the southern Appalachians.
Catastrophic and life-threatening flash and 【3†urban flooding†en.wikipedia.org】, including numerous significant landslides, is expected across portions of the southern Appalachians through Friday.
Considerable to locally catastrophic flash and urban flooding is likely for northwestern and northern Florida and the Southeast through Friday. Widespread significant river flooding and isolated major river flooding are likely.
Helene is gaining strength as it approaches the Florida Big Bend. A large 【4†eye†en.wikipedia.org】 has become apparent in satellite images, and that feature has been gradually clearing out over the past few hours. Convective banding is wrapping around the eye, and recent microwave images and reports from the NOAA and Air Force Hurricane Hunter aircraft indicate than an eyewall is almost completely closed. The minimum pressure has been dropping steadily to near 960 mb, and based on the aircraft flight-level wind data, the initial intensity is estimated to have increased to 105 mph (90 knots). There have been several reports of tropical-storm-force winds occurring in portions of South Florida and the Florida Keys during the past few hours.

	The large hurricane is picking up speed and has turned slightly to the north-northeast. The latest initial motion is 025/12 knots. A notably faster north-northeastward motion is expected through landfall, which is expected to occur in the Florida Big Bend region this evening. After Helene moves inland, it is forecast to track over Georgia and then slow down or stall over the 【5†Tennessee】 Valley when it merges with a mid- to upper-level low pressure system. Only minor changes were made to the previous NHC track forecast. Significant intensification is expected until Helene reaches the coast since the overall atmospheric and oceanic conditions will remain conducive. The amount of strengthening will likely depend on how much the inner core can contract and consolidate. The HWRF and HMON models show significant strengthening to category 4 status, while most of the other models are a little lower. The main message is that Helene will likely make landfall as a large major hurricane in the Florida Big Bend this evening, and all preparations in the hurricane warning area should be rushed to completion. It should also be re-emphasized that Helene is a very large hurricane. In fact, comparing the system with previous hurricanes in the 【6†Gulf of Mexico】 over the past couple of decades, Helene is at the upper bound in terms of size. As a result, storm surge, wind, and rainfall impacts will extend far away from the center and well outside the forecast cone, particularly on the east side. In addition, the fast forward speed when Helene moves inland will result in a far inland penetration of strong winds over parts of the southeastern United States, including strong gusts over higher terrain of the southern Appalachians. Accordingly, a higher-than-normal gust factor is indicated in the official forecast while Helene is inland. Hurricane Helene is forecasted to continue intensifying before making landfall in Florida on Thursday, Sept. 26.
Originally a tropical storm, Helene became a Category 1 hurricane on Wednesday, Sept. 25, and is expected to bring "life-threatening storm surge, damaging winds and flooding rains" to a large portion of Florida and southeastern parts of the U.S., the 【57†National Hurricane Center†x.com】 announced.
As of 10 a.m. local time on Sept. 25, the storm is located about 85 miles northeast of Cozumel, Mexico, with maximum sustained winds of 80 mph, the NHC said in an 【58†advisory†www.nhc.noaa.gov】.
The NHC added 【59†that hurricane and tropical storm conditions are predicted for the Yucatan Peninsula of Mexico†www.nhc.noaa.gov】 for the next several hours, where hurricane and tropical storm warnings are in effect. The agency also warned along the entire west coast of the Florida Peninsula and Florida Big Bend of storm surge, adding that the highest inundation of more than 10 feet is forecasted for the Big Bend coast.
The advisory noted residents in those affected areas should listen to local officials' advice and evacuate if ordered.

"Devastating hurricane-force winds are expected across portions of northern Florida and southern Georgia where the core of Helene moves inland," the NHC said in its alert. "Preparations to protect life and property should be completed by early Thursday since tropical storm conditions are expected to begin within these areas on Thursday."

Additionally, Helene is forecasted to possibly contribute to life-threatening flash flooding and urban flooding across parts of northwestern and northern Florida, the Southeast, the southern Appalachians and the upper Tennessee Valley starting on Sept. 25 through Friday, Sept. 27, the advisory continued.
According to forecasters, Helene is expected to reach Category 3 status, with winds approaching as high as 125 mph, prior to making landfall Thursday, the 【62†Tallahassee Democrat†www.tallahassee.com】 reported.

"Helene stands toe-to-toe with any of the threats that Florida has faced over the past ten years or indeed really over hurricane history," said Ryan Truchelut, a hurricane forecaster for the USA Today Network-Florida, told the newspaper.
Ahead of the impending storm in his state, Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis issued 【64†a state of emergency for 41 counties†www.flgov.com】 on Monday, Sept. 24.
"There have been local communities and counties that have issued evacuation orders in a number of Florida counties, you still have time to be able to do that and so I would heed those warnings," the governor said, per 【65†NBC affiliate WFLA†www.wfla.com】. "You can hide from the wind, and there will be significant wind on this storm, but you have to run from the water."
